The university provides many different options to support both undergraduate and graduate students as they navigate their time at CWRU. From health, counseling and wellness services to food and housing insecurity, there are a lot of opportunities to get the help you need.

 - Locations of on-campus food pantries and additional food resources
- Housing Insecurity
 - On-campus housing resources and intake for shelters
- Student Emergency Fund
 - The Student Emergency Fund was created by a generous gift from Candace and Vincent Gaudiani to assist Case Western Reserve University students who encounter an unforeseen financial emergency or event which would otherwise prevent them from continuing their education at Case Western Reserve.
- Student Mental Health Fund
 - The Student Mental Health Fund is available to assist Case Western Reserve University students in obtaining necessary mental health care. While many students are open to receiving mental health care and seek out services, the financial costs of receiving appropriate levels of care remain a significant barrier for many students.
- Interreligious Council
 - The IRC is here—offering a collaborative community where every student, staff, and faculty feels encouraged to explore their spirituality, faith traditions, and/or religious identity.

Reporting Systems

- Community Concerns Reporting System
 - The goal of the Community Concerns Reporting System (CCRS) is to help educate and promote an inclusive community by supporting students through a clear and streamlined process for reporting incidents of perceived mistreatment, cultural/ethnic insensitivity, and bias. The CCRS allows CWRU community members who have witnessed or have experienced incidents of bias, prejudice or discrimination involving a student to submit a report to the Community Concerns Reporting Response Team. If you would like to report an incident that does not involve a student, please contact the Office of Equity.

- Office of Equity

- The Office for Equity is available to support anyone who is experiencing or has experienced sexual harassment or sexual violence, and anyone who is accused of or rumored to be responsible for engaging in that conduct. Obtaining support is a primary reason for contacting the Office for Equity to share information about your experience or someone else's. The Office for Equity wants to ensure that CWRU community members feel supported
- Resources
 - Confidential Support
- Filing a Report
 - To obtain immediate and other support as a person who is impacted by sexual harassment or sexual violence, or to share that another person requires that support, or to initiate an investigation of possible sexual harassment or sexual violence, members of the CWRU community should contact the Office for Equity by using the contact information below or by completing this form. Individuals can call, text, email, or walk-in to the Office for Equity to request a meeting with an Equity Specialist & Investigator. People seeking support can share details about their experience or choose not to do so - regardless, they are still entitled to assistance from the Office for Equity.
